

Index of Islay, Scotland Placenames

Bob McQueen

bmcqueen@waikato.ac.nz

This list contains the names of about 460 farms and settlements on Islay, Scotland, including names used from 1750 to the present. It does not contain the names of rivers, lakes or other physical features. The intent is to assist in tracking of genealogical research for ancestors that emigrated from Islay in the 1800s, when the name of farm or settlement was commonly used on tenant records, and birth, christening and marriage records. However, a variety of spellings were often used for the same location, so this list contains as many of the versions of the names used as possible, referenced to the names that appear on modern maps.

Notes

1. NR references are to the British Ordnance Survey Landranger (sheet 60 Islay) and Pathfinder (sheets 397, 398, 410, 411, 424, 425, 439) series of maps. NR refers to the major grid square ID, the first three digits represent the vertical grid line reference number, and the second three digits represent the horizontal grid line reference number. Each units digit in the three digit grid reference represents 1/10 km, so the distance between references can be roughly calculated by subtracting without having a map. Maps can be ordered from <http://www.elstead.co.uk>, and the cost is about five pounds each - credit cards accepted. You need only one Landranger map (1:50000) or all seven of the Pathfinder series (1:25000) to cover the whole of Islay.
2. The name spelling that is taken as "standard" is the spelling that appears on these maps. Other spellings from the map of early farms and tenant lists are given with a reference to the standard spelling entry, which has the grid reference.
3. Versions of the names of the farms have been taken from the map by surveyor Stephen McDougall (data from 1749-51, printed 1848) which indicated main house locations. This map was subsequently redrawn (with clearer names but without house locations) and an electronic version is available named "bigislay.jpg". The indications of the building locations on the early map have been correlated with the locations given on the modern maps for present day farm buildings and in some cases old stone walls, and these have been used to derive the grid references. These names are indicated in the list with a "m" in column 3.
4. In many cases, the variations of the name can be easily worked out as phonetic equivalents. However, in a few cases, similar looking names represent quite separate locations (Kilkolumkill and Killcolumkill).
5. The parish in which the name is located is given in the second column, mainly derived from the parish farm lists. Boundaries between parishes are determined from these lists. Parish names are helpful to determine marriages and baptisms from the old parish records.
6. The letter in the fourth column indicates the source of the placename spelling - m is from the McDougall map published in 1848 but surveyed in 1749-51, bb is from the 1828 blackbook tenant list transcription by Toni Sinclair, and (where different from other sources) p is from the parish farm lists possibly corresponding to the McDougall survey of 1749-51. No entry in this column indicates a placename taken from the Landranger and Pathfinder maps. Unresolved locations, mainly from the blackbook entries, are indicated with a "?".
7. Corrections and additions most welcome! Updated versions of this file can be downloaded from <http://www.mngt.waikato.ac.nz/bmcqueen/webdocs/islay>
